BEST "STORIES" GIVE EMPHASIS TO HORSES

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Getting a poor press is something theatrical people are always working against and for the simple reason that the newspapers can make or break a production. Racing is another amusement extremely sensitive in reaction to the printed word. Moderns are voracious readers and, whether conscious of it or not, they have their opinions formed for the most part by what they peruse.

Lately there has been sweeping across country the notion that "writeups" of sporting events, notably racing, are not on the high plane of the events. Some of the critics go as far as to say that the greatest weakness in the entire racing structure is the manner in which racing is purveyed to the reading public. The severest critics are not outsiders, either, but members of the fourth estate themselves.

I was reading the other day remarks of Neil Newman in The Thoroughbred Record that are right to the point. He says:

> Far too much attention is paid in the daily press to the attendance, the amount wagered in the totalisator, the amount of money at stake and, last of all, the time. These are the fetishes of the present day journalist. Search through the daily press and see if you can, from the reports of the races therein contained, visualize Discovery, Omaha, or King Saxon. How often does the racing scribe even take the trouble to tell the color of an outstanding horse?

Whenever I have anything to say I attempt to confine my observations to the thoroughbreds, whether writing of their doughty deeds out on the race course, or to that other fascinating part of the pastime, breeding. The race iself, it would appear, should be given more space at all times than extraneous things, such as those mentioned by the expert I have taken the liberty of quoting.

It is perfectly true that we are "shortening up" our horses by shortening the distances of the races. As I have often contended, scrambles of five and one-half furlongs are ruining not only the breed but the jockeys. No contest should be at a shorter distance than one mile. I am building up the Tanforan Futurity, a produce stakes to be run for the first time in 1938, and it will be at one mile.

BADEN CLOSES MEET NEXT WEEK

Baden Kennel Club will wind up its successful summer meeting August 31, according to an announcement made today by Mr. R. C. Stickle, president of the South San Francisco greyhound racing organization.

With the development of the sensational Galloper, Parade, Billy Murray and other fast dogs for its record this season, Baden plans a series of special events for its final week.

Saturday night the San Mateo County Council, Veterans of Foreign Wars, will sponsor a special program, with a race named for each of the posts in the country. Leading officials of the organization will participate, and the Daly City Band will provide music for the evening. As a feature race, Galloper, the great Baden champion, will make one of his final appearances this year on the coast.

Next week's program will be replete with racing thrills, including the running of the Baden Derby, an event which attracts the best greyhounds each meeting.

RIO VISTA DERBY FOR FISHERMEN

(By Bill Grantham)

Not much to report on bass fishing over the week end. A few taken at the piers. Beach of San Francisco very poor. A few taken at Mussel Rock, Salada and Rockaway. Isleton, Rio Vista and Steamboat Slough showed plenty of small fish.

Reports are that a big run of salmon is on at Klamath River. Over 700 pounds taken in two days of last week, which means that the steel heads will not be very far behind. So, boys, all ye who are salmon or steel head bent, get going. About two solid months of good fishing in view in those waters.

A two weeks vacation around September would be absolutely perfect by spending one week at Klamath and one week around Rio Vista. Salmon, steelhead and stripers abound. The three 5's that mean the ultimate in California fishermen's lives.

Don't forget the Rio Vista Derby, September 8. Also the Club movies, Friday, September 6.

DALY CITY HAS ENTRY IN FLORAL QUEEN CONTEST

Miss Ruth Lindorff Has Hopes To Win Honors At County Fiesta.

Daly City has officially entered one of its fair daughters in the contest for Queen of the San Mateo County Products and Floral Fiesta, to be held at Bay Meadows, October 11, 12 and 13.

Ruth was born in Salt Lake City and migrated, with her parents, to Daly City five years ago. She is a popular member of the younger set and has a large circle of friends who are assisting in her campaign. The young lady is a graduate of Mission High School and a member of Golden West Chapter Order of Rainbow Girls.

The Record wishes you the best of luck, Ruth.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL OPENS FALL TERM NEXT MONDAY

Many Improvements Have Been Made To Building And Grounds — More Than 100 New Pupils To Be Enrolled.

Jefferson Union High School will open for the fall term next Monday morning at 8:15. The building has been thoroughly cleaned and the class rooms put in shape during the summer vacation. Everything is in readiness for the beginning of work on the opening day.

A crew of SERA men, working under the direction of Jack Price, have made a vast improvement on the grounds. Much grading has been done, and the entire front area has been seeded for lawn. This was made necessary by the work done in the widening of Mission street in front of the school.

Principal James Ferguson urges all parents to see that their children enroll on Monday morning. The main cause of a large number of the failures in school, he says, is late enrollment. The first day of school is most important for the reason that on that day books are distributed, the term's work explained and lessons assigned for the following day. The pupils who do not enroll until the second day or later get a bad start. As in everything else, this too often proves a handicap that cannot be overcome.

At the close of last term the new program was arranged and the pupils assigned to their different classes. In this way it was made possible for the whole school to get down to work as soon as the fall term opens.

Over one hundred new pupils will enter as freshmen from the grammar schools of the Jefferson Union High School district.

Two new teachers have been added to the faculty to take care of the increase in enrollment. Mr. Cecil Disbrow will teach Smith-Hughes science and mathematics and coach football, and Mr. Dietrich Vollbrecht will teach German and English. Both come to Jefferson High with excellent recommendations.

COUNTY FIESTA WILL SHOW MANY NEW FEATURES

Largest Floral Display Ever Held In Area Is Promised Exhibition Patrons

The biggest floral display ever held in San Mateo County with the additional attraction of pageants, parades, fireworks and all manner of related entertainment features will be held in the beautiful Bay Meadows Grand Stand and Club House on October 11, 12 and 13 at San Mateo. The largest display will be devoted to chrysanthemums, of which there are 192 acres grown in San Mateo County.

Enormous showings of carnations, asters, snapdragons, roses, gladioli, and cactus with a special display of orchids will be part of the show.

Classifications including commercial growers, private estate gardeners and amateurs have been provided for. Schools, garden clubs and Boy and Girl Scout Troops will all have their chances to win coveted awards. A novelty will be an elaborate exhibit of rare birds and tropical fish. The preliminary schedule for the garden and flower division of the Fiesta has just been mailed from the headquarters, 116 B street, San Mateo, by Merrit A. Vinson. Copies may be obtained at the headquarters.

A floral pageant staged by Fred Carlyle, famous dramatic coach, will use large groups of trained dancers from each of the fifteen communities in San Mateo County which are cooperating with the Fiesta. Already groups are in training under the directorship of Charlotte Griggs in Palo Alto, Charlotte Rider in Redwood City, Dorothy Heck in San Mateo, and Miss Rose in Daly City. Otis Carrington, musical director of the Sequoia High School in Redwood City, is training a choral group of eighty singers. Percy Hutchings, baritone, and Ruth Tomlinson, soprano, both of Burlingame, will be soloists with the pageant.

BENEFIT BALL GAINS HEADWAY

The Benefit Dance for Officer Edmond L. Heim of the Daly City Police Department is going over in a big way. Those of you who have purchased tickets should be sure and keep the evening of September 7 open on your social calendar. Of course, it isn't too late for the few citizens who haven't secured tickets to buy now, for every one of us should be there with the "Auld Acquaintance" spirit.

Ed is convalescing splendidly, but it will be a long time before he will be able to be on the job again, and to see all the town folks there at the Tanforan Club House will line the stretch of getting well with many pleasant memories.

We'll be seeing you Saturday evening, September 7. Where? At the Tanforan Club House.

Town of Palmer Springs Up in Alaska

Blazing a path as a pioneer of a new-type action picture is George O'Brien's new starring picture, "The Cowboy Millionaire," showing at the Daly City Theater for three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, August 25, 26 and 27.

In "The Cowboy Millionaire" the settings denote wealth, and bespeak refinement and culture. The women wear clothes befitting wealthy society. No cowboy shoots up the dust of the village street. No chases predominate the picture, yet this fast-moving film is packed to the hilt with action.

Also on the same screen, "Come Up Sometime and See" Mae West in "Goin' To Town."

WONDER WHO IS COUNTY ENGINEER?

(By Bosco)

Who is our county engineer?
In this we're quite impartial,
But we admit it's not so clear,
If it be Scott or Marshall.

Last week 'twas Marshall—was it not?
Or can we be mistaken?
For maybe it might have been Scott,
Whose orders had been taken.

Yes—it was Scott, or are we wrong?
Though Marshall it might be,
For neither one stays in for long,
For some one swipes the key.

It's Marshall, who is now on deck,
Just why?—Now we forgot;
Or have we erred again—by heck!
For it might still be Scott!

Aha, at last we've solved the plot,
It's Marshall—we are certain;
But maybe after all it's Scott—
We're beat—ring down the curtain.

TIME FOR HELP TO SILVER ON BIG SCALE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

As governments are inextricably bound up in these changing times with economic progress, any suggestion that the ruling powers do something to speed things up is properly given thoughtful consideration. A specific case is that of the appeal by well known publicists to the Canadian government to follow the lead of Uncle Sam in assisting silver.

British Columbia produces more of the white metal than any other of the provinces up north and it has been pointed out that had the lead of the United States been followed by Canada last year the output of Canadian mines, purchased at 64½ cents, would have realized a national profit of more than $2,000,000 as measured by world price and an equal sum to British Columbia upon the division of seigniorage.

As is well known, British Columbia's silver production is largely as a by-product of lead and increase in silver prices to a level permitting mining of silver as the major metal would undoubtedly result in an increase in lead production. For some time the lead market has been quite stable, but in the event of a material increase in production it might be necessary for the Cenadian government to adopt a scheme of storing excess supply.

* * *

Word comes from the north that an important strike of high grade silver-lead ore has been made at the Utica mine, Slocan district. A sample of the ore was sent to Vancouver. The sample weighs about 35 pounds, carrying ruby silver. The mine was famous some years ago for its high grade ore.

* * *

Interest in placer diggings on Scotch Creek is increasing at a rapid pace. Some of the ground is said to run up to $9 a yard. English capital has taken over a number of leases in the last few months. One English company owns nine miles of the creek and prospecting is going on at other places.

* * *

Placer mining is booming in the Anchorage district, following heavy rainfalls which relieved an acute shortage of water. Close observers say they would not be surprised if the virgin gold output of Alaska would be more than $20,000,000 for the twelve months of 1935.

* * *

Warnings have again been sent out that "tenderfeet" should be careful to be properly equipped before prospecting in the north. An old timer recently visited the Cache Creek district and found some men without outfits having a hard time of it on account of lack of experience. Actual development work was delayed by the late season of ice, but is expected to continue until late in the fall.

* * *

Horses will be used to pack supplies to mining property on the Unuk. When a road is built in to the Unuk it is stid it will have one of the easiest gradients of any mining road in the north.

MASS MEETING FOR ELECTION

Daly City Hall Auditorium was filled to overflowing, Wednesday evening of this week in response to a call for hearing on the special election to be held tomorrow, Saturday, for the purpose of raising money for city improvements.

Many interested citizens discussed the various projects advanced by the Daly City Recreation and Improvement Club and which they have advocated for several months.

While all seemed to favor municipal improvements, some of the projects were severely citicized by several speakers.

The principal objections advanced were that the projects should have been segregated so as to give the citizens an opportunity of expressing their opinions as to each individual improvement proposed.

The consensus of opinion expressed at the meeting seemed to be that an election for a bond issue should have been called rather than one for the purpose of raising the money necesesary by imposing increased taxes so as to make payment possible without the additional interest cost.

Well, anyhow, the voters will have the last say at the polls tomorrow,

It is hoped that the citizens of this municipality will turn out en masse and exercise their franchise so that a concrete expression may be had on the subject.

SYNOPSIS

Following his father's bitter criticism of his idle life, and the withdrawal of financial assistance, Hal Ireland, only son of a wealthy banker, finds himself practically without funds but with the promise of a situation in San Francisco, which he must reach, from New York, within a definite time limit. He takes passage with a cross-country auto party on a "share expense" basis. With five other members of the party, an attractive girl, Barry Trafford; middle-aged Giles Kerrigan; Sister Anastasia, a nun; and an individual whom he instinctively dislikes, Martin Crack, he starts his journey. Barry's reticence annoys him. To Kerrigan he takes at once, but he is unable to shake off a feeling of uneasiness. He distrusts Crack, although finding his intimacy with Kerrigan ripening, and he makes a little progress with Barry. Through a misunderstanding, at a stopping place, Hal is directed to Barry's room, instead of his own. Propinquity seems to soften Barry's unfriendliness, and they exchange kisses. Next day Hal tells Barry he loves her. She only answers that she mustn't love him, without giving any reason.

Kerrigan's eyes danced merrily under their half mustaches. "You're sure the torque hasn't taken charge?" he said. "Wouldn't like to stop off for a cold shower somewhere down the line?"

"Stop for nothing, suh," said Hal. "I want the Mississippi, what Ring Lardner jokingly called the Father of Waters. It is out here somewhere, isn't it?"

"Was last time I came through," said Kerrigan, the sparkle of his look laughing with and at Hal's.

Hal had a glimpse of Barry's face: her eyes, unpreoccupied, gave him brief, intimate approval, and his heart sang higher.

As each vista gave way to another level run over closely farmed country, Hal grew impatient for that coming to the rim of a long plateau which he conceived would reveal the Mississippi, flat and blue and broad, lying infinitely off toward the veils of the horizon on either hand. Then, after they had settled down to what seemed another whole country of unwatered farmland. Kerrigan took the dead cigarette end from his lips and leaned forward. "The old fella," he said quietly; and he added, as if he meant it to be all very casual, "Here, let me treat you to your first Mississippi crossing." He reached into his trousers pocket, jingling change.

They went out on the narrow track slowly, each slanted girder flicking a gentle echo at them, and neither Hal nor Kerrigan spoke. Halfway across, Mrs. Pulsipher's voice bustled suddenly into the car: "Why, this is the Mississippi river."

"It—it is," said John, as if she'd waked him out of guilty reverie.

"Is it, Mr. Kerrigan?"

"The original, mam."

Hal said to Kerrigan, "Remember Huck Finn and that nigger on the raft; the loaves of bread with mercury in 'em floating down and a cannon booming over the water from the ferry boat, to raise their bodies."

"Gad, sir, wasn't I just thinking of that?" said Kerrigan—half startled, half pleased, as if it were a joint experience which he thought Hal might have forgotten. "I never cross the old rogue without thinking of it. I swear—just that minute—I was nowhere else but there."

"Then there's more than one mind-reader along," said Hal drily, a faint check upon his full pleasure.

"Meaning?" said Kerrigan.

Hal gave a brief shake of his head, aware of Crack sitting behind him, retrospectively aware that he had been there all afternoon. Hal had the curious impulse to recall what he'd thought and said in that time, as you might try to remember what you'd done in a room where you find you've been watched. Then he caught himself and shook off the quick discomfort. Crack might sit there as knowingly, as pleased with private, drowsy thoughts as he liked: he had nothing to do with Hal or the Mississippi or this moment.

Then Kerrigan tossed up a thick finger to indicate the Burlington shore where their bridge ran over the railway. "That belongs," he said. Four white ex-Pullman cars stood on a siding, a patiently suffered curvature to their wooden spines, broad roofs smoothed down over open-end-platforms, window-arches gay with marbled glass. Along their white sides, gold letters were painted: "Davenport Bros. Great World's Fair Shows."

"Gosh," Barry called from the back, "wouldn't it be fun to see their show?"

"It would," said Kerrigan. "It'd be fun to see it, and stow away in those cars afterward."

"It'd be fun," said Hal, "to do almost anything." And in saying that, there was a separate sharing of this moment with both Barry and Kerrigan, a thankful comfort that could put away the uneasiness of a minute ago—almost put it quite away. The night was near now, and his coming to Barry, to the rout of fear from her bravery, and to his hope of Fortune in the world.

Iowa rolled in tireless undulations, the road taped over them like the flat-healed scar of a careful cut, the coming loops visible from each rise. The sun went behind a long, fagged cloud in the west, edging it with white incandescence and spreading a fan of tapered shafts below. They crossed the Skunk river, and rolled on over the dips and rises toward the sinking sun. If there had been a chance of persuading Mrs. Pulsipher to put up with the facilities of a little place called Agency, Hal and Kerrigan would have stopped there, for the taste of its name. But Ottumwa was close beyond, and they found clean tourist cabins in a grove of trees beside the Des Moines river, where the hopeful, snug squeaking of crickets in the grass made the gathered evening seem cooler.

The proprietor said that, given time, his old lady would throw together as good a feed, and better, and cheaper, than any they could get in them places uptown. Hal took Rasputin to a garage and supervised his priming for tomorrow. And when he got back, the others were halfway through a meal that had even such intrepid appetites as the Pulsiphers' working uphill. The full buoyancy that Hal had carried through the afternoon still refused to take account of hunger. He did the swift best he could, so that the proprietor's old lady shouldn't be hurt; but when Barry pushed her chair back from the long table and squeaked her lips at Doc, he abandoned the business abruptly and followed her outdoors.

Fresh eagerness exulted in his blood, tried to lift his body with a hundred different excitements, urged him to leap and shout out his joy for these hints of immortality. He stopped her walking with his hand, turned her to him and held her while he said, "Barry, we've got to go somewhere—quickly."

In the light from her cabin under the trees, he saw that her smile was slow, the droop of her eyelids slow, weary. "Hal, we can't," she said, as if he had been urging her for a long time. "I couldn't—couldn't tell you what I have to. I'm too tired to be strong. I shouldn't tell you it's hoping, wishing, praying about you that's made me so tired, but I want to tell you. Because I—I— Hal, we can't go: I've got to go in." She moved a little, as if she were going to let her head go against his shoulder. But she stopped herself, and her low, lovely voice murmured, "My darling."

"You don't have to tell me anything," said Hal, shocked by the quiet decision that was trying to rob him of this time he had so surely looked to: "all you have to do is listen to me, to the things I must tell you. You can rest, listening to them—just up there, a little way, by the river. We'll sit against a tree, and when you want me to stop, I'll stop and you can sleep on my shoulder. I promise, if you tell me to, I won't speak again—not a word, not even what keeps on running and trembling in all my nerves, muscles, heart, tongue, everything: I love you. I love you so that—"

"Hal, don't, oh, don't, please, Hal darling." Her free hand gripped his arm hard, and he couldn't tell whether it shook to enforce what she said or whether the desperation that shivered under her voice was in her body, too.

"Barry," said Hal in severe quiet. "You've got to listen. Why do you frighten yourself? Why do you try to frighten me—before you've let me say what I must say, before—"

Her exclamation was a whimper of fear, and she turned her frantic head toward the cabin. "Sister Anastasia!"

The door opened on the neat, lighted room of raw boards, with the nun's silhouette in the oblong. "Yes, sweet?" she said, her modest voice tranquil and soothing as the sound of a little wind among sleeping trees.

"Sister, I just wanted to know you were there. I'm coming now. Please wait for me." She bowed her head as if to see more clearly the joining of their hands in the dimness. "Good night, my darling," she said hurriedly. "I'm a coward—a coward, and I'm so sorry."

She had her hand away from him, and quickly she was at the nun's side in the lighted doorway.

* * * * * * *

"I'll bet you," said Kerrigan, and the smoking cigarette end in the corner of his mouth looked short enough to burn him, "I'll bet you if we went in to town we could find a something would knock us out from under our hats."

"I'll bet you we couldn't," said Hal listlessly, the echo of Rasputin's long droning in his ears again. "I'll bet you two somethings we couldn't."

"Sir, a wager," said Kerrigan. "Do we ride or walk?"

"Walk," said Hal. "It's not far."

In spite of the fact that he had no use for it, he felt the soft, impermanent refreshment under the stars. It was to him as if, out of a world murmurous with simple expectancy and unentangled pleasure in the hushed resting of the night, he were singled out for traffic with deviousness and complication. Put into plain order of words, it was all so straightforward: he loved Barry; she indicated by every look, every gesture, every shading of her low voice that she was, at the least, ready to love him. So there they were—or should be. If she wasn't sure of herself, she could tell him so; if there was a more definite barrier against her coming to him, it could be spoken, faced, and—if not demolished—then circumvented. That was so simple. Barry was candid of nature, as honorable as her golden head, her lithe body, were lovely; yet she ran from him, left him to a darkened, indefinable complexity in which he felt the restive nearness of fear and remembered the prescience of something impending, something that seemed to prowl in stealth out of the future, vanish into it again when he looked warily to see its shape.

Thank heaven for Kerrigan—good Kerrigan. Hal had started out with him for the purpose of getting a stiff, resentful drink and venting his beleaguered gloom on whatever his companion chose to talk about. But just in walking beside him, Kerrigan's air of unacquisitive well-being, of confidence in the propriety to his soul of anything that might happen, brought Hal's hopes a little away from the dominion of bafflement and left his uneasy brooding to wait.

They went on up the street. Down a half-respectable alley with a wrecking car and some stacks of old tires in it, they came to a door that had "Office" printed on the dark glass; and Kerrigan knocked briskly. A crack opened, revealing bright light on unstirred layers of tobacco smoke beyond a screen, and a dim strip of face that held one steady eye.

"Pete here?" said Kerrigan.

"No."

"Like to see where he works," said Kerrigan.

"He don't work nights."

"Frisby sent us. I've got his penny."

It was a small, unpolished room with perhaps four tables and a short bar, a mirror behind that, and on display there a museum collection of old, labeled, but empty bottles.

They sat down at a table, and a dark, competent young man waited without speaking. Kerrigan turned to him pleasantly. "What's the bourbon sitchation?" he said. There was no particular in which you could have said the young man's expression yielded to Kerrigan's friendly ease, yet it did change; and he said, "We got some stuff here in Kentucky bottles, but you wouldn't call it bourbon."

Kerrigan looked at Hal. "Rye, then?" he said.

"Fine," said Hal.

Kerrigan looked up and said "Rye."

The young man stood there watching Kerrigan steadily; he said, "Want some bourbon?"

"Bourbon?" said Kerrigan, with just the right mixture of interest and incredulity.

"Half a minute," the young man said crisply and disappeared through a door beside the bar.

"Now there you are," said Hal sincerely. "If I lived to be a hundred, I'd never have the gift. Here it is fifteen minutes after you decide you want a drink in a strange town, and you not only get it but get something special, almost without asking for it. I need lessons."

The young man came back with a veteran bottle, three-quarters full. Kerrigan read the stained label reverently while they waited for glasses and water. It was bourbon, and not of this decade either; and even before they tasted it they had tacitly acknowledged that this time was ripe for something more than a nightcap. Kerrigan hooked a chair toward him with his toe and swung his feet up on it before he said, on a relaxed key, "It's a good trip; and there's more of it coming to us yet."

"Hope not more of it only," said Hal.

"There's a toast no bourbon's too good for," Kerrigan said quickly, almost as if there were something a little foolish about saying it. "A good trip," he went on, "in spite of something funny, something queer going on that—" He stopped as Hal's look promptly sharpened. "Maybe you know all about it," he said.

"I don't know a thing about it," said Hal, "but every so often it gives me a scunner, makes me feel something might be going to happen."

"Y'know," Kerrigan began, watching the young bartender pass to answer a knock at the door, "we had gifts once, a couple of ten-thousand years ago, when we were roaring around Middle Europe in bearskins, looking out for ourselves and making darn few mistakes—we had gifts then that have got good and rusty since. Sometimes we get some use out of 'em—in hunches, intuitions; sometimes one of those rusty gadgets will get contact—try to do its job—and our civilized, so-called minds can't make out what that bumping is in the cellar; it makes us uncomfortable. If you could harness that, even without understanding it—"

The bartender came to their table and leaned his hands on it, looking down at its ring-stained surface. "There's somebody wants in," he said. "Says he knows you two." He looked at Kerrigan.

Kerrigan glanced at Hal in dubious expectance, then up at the young man again. "Don't know anybody here," he said, giving his head a shake that was not quite final. "No. Tell him he's made a mistake; or—wait, I'll look at him." He dropped his feet and heaved himself up reluctantly.

Just talking about it had brought that unsubstantial whisper of premonition somewhere near again; Hal cursed it, and the interruption that left him there alone with it.

Behind the screen the doorlatch clicked and there was a moment of silence. Then without surprise or pleasure, Kerrigan's voice said, "Why, hello there, splash"; and he came back into the room looking gloomily thoughtful. Martin Crack ambled after him, his smooth-skinned face under tidy hair barely stirred by the slight unassuming smile.

"Sit down, sit down," Kerrigan grumbled at him.

Explorer Finds Columbus' Fort

Positive Identification of Ruins in Haiti.

A New Orleans explorer has come home from Haiti with evidence that he had rediscovered the site where Columbus made his first settlement in the New world.

He established St. Michel hill, on the swampy coast of Cap Haitien harbor and near the native fishing village of Petit Anse, as the spot where Columbus left a "tower and fort and large cellar," called it La Navidad, and recorded the site in the log of his journey.

The explorer, Maurice Ries, of Tulane university, brought back a signet ring of Queen Isabella La Catholica, hawk bells, which Columbus mentioned having traded with the natives for gold, and the wrought hand-guard of a Spanish rapier. He found them in the ruins.

Mr. Ries said that he had almost certainly fixed the site. It is still one of the most desolate places in the New world. He and his wife, who accompanied him, traveled over trails almost effaced, through deserts and swamps.

The Haitian government and the American minister, Norman Armour, assisted in the search, which led from Port-au-Prince, capital of the island, to the black city of Cap Haitien. Mr. Ries used old and new maps, charts of coastlines, currents, winds and tides to fix the area for his quest.

From the description in Columbus' log he decided that Mount St. Michel was the spot where the Santa Maria had struck on Christmas eve, 1492, as Columbus skirted the coast after touching Cuba.

Here Columbus built a fort from the timbers of his wrecked flagship and left a garrison of 43 men. Indians slaughtered the men and destroyed the fort 10 months later. No historian has been able to establish the site definitely.

On the north coast Mr. Ries found the ruins of Isabella, which Columbus later set up as a permanent colony. Mr. Ries found mounds, about four feet high, following the general outline of buildings reported in Columbus' log. Quarries, from which the Discoverer took stones to build the settlement, were found a mile away.

CROWS FORESEE CRASH

That crows have a foreboding of disaster was shown recently in Ogmore Vale, Wales. For 90 years crows have built their nests in the branches of a lofty oak 200 years old. Without warning they all moved to another tree. A week later their old home tottered in a breeze and fell. After the crash the crows cawed triumphantly.

CAN WE GUAGE PROSPERITY BY GOLD HOLDINGS

It Would Seem Recovery Depends On Circulation Of Created Wealth

Sidney Nooman asks and answers some interesting questions in the following article in the Vancouver Sun:

Can national activity, prosperity and happiness be measured in terms of gold?

Of what benefit is $9 billions of inactive and sterilized gold to any nation?

Judged by that standard, the United States should be the most prosperous nation of the world.

Yet 22,000,000 people remain upon relief rolls and many millions more are drawing sustenance from federal, state and civic payrolls.

Unless wealth circulates, is it of value?

These are questions brought forcibly to public attention by the present conditions in Canada and the United States.

During the past three months Canada has registered great gains in gold holdings, currency coverage on August 1 standing at 66.09 per cent.

Bank of Canada reserve on the latter date was $193,123,024, with notes in circulation of $77,135,296.

Turnover of business in the Dominion in 1934 is estimated at 41,748 millions, so that present Bank of Canada currency issued would theoretically be used no less than 542 times to handle that volume.

There is also reason to expect volume of business in 1935 will exceed that of the previous year.

The increase of gold holdings and decrease in currency outstanding is illustrated by an official statement received by The Vancouver Sun from the Department of Finance, Ottawa, covering the situation as of May 30, 1935.

It showed total gold holdings by government, Bank of Canada and chartered banks of $118,021,874.

Bank of Canada notes $74,737,681 and chartered bank notes outstanding $121,419,937 or total of $196,157,618.

Amount in the hands of the public was given as $145,501,663.

Last March we received figures from the same department showing gold coverage of 19.05 per cent in 1921; 24.47 per cent in 1928; 15.98 in 1929; 24.32 per cent in 1930 and 48.88 per cent in 1934.

Analyzed, these statements show that gold holdings stood at $118,021,874 on May 30, 1935, with notes outstanding of $196,157,618, a ratio of approximately 60 per cent.

In other words, since that time, coverage has been increased 6.09 per cent, while currency has been increased but $2,397,615, so far as Bank of Canada notes are concerned.

Dominion business turnover as estimated by the Department of Trade and Commerce, for the years 1924-34, is as follows:

	Millions
1924	$35,225
1925	36,203
1926	38,770
1927	46,139
1928	55,250
1929	59,399
1930	47,594
1931	39,856
1932	32,737
1933	37,984
1934	41,748

Upon the basis of 25 per cent gold coverage, considered safe margin by the World Monetary Conference, Bank of Canada could safely issue notes to the total of $772,492,096 or $77.24 per capita for the 10,000,000 inhabitants of the Dominion.

At the present time the outstanding total of $77,135,296 is equal to per capita quota of but $7.71.

Comparison of Canada's position with that of the United States is interesting.

On June 29, 1935, U. S. Treasury statement showed gold holdings of $9,115,380,809 and silver holdings of $823,333,808.

Currency outstanding on the same date was $6,320,335,959 equal to gold coverage ratio of 144 per cent.

Gold holdings of the U. S. are equal to approximately 33.3 per cent of the entire national debt.

On the basis of 60 per cent coverage, United States could issue currency to total of $15,192,301,348 or 2½ times the amount now outstanding.

On the basis of 25 per cent coverage, currency to the total of $36,461,523,236 could be safely issued.

In view of conditions in the United States, the question naturally arises as to the benefit of a large sterilized stock of gold metal.

Real wealth is best expressed in terms of activity, prosperity and general happiness.

Although Canada's stock of gold is but 120th part of that of the United States, there is no evidence that greater happiness or activity is enjoyed by the latter's population of approximately 125,000,000.

In other words, it is at least demonstrated that prosperity, activity and happiness are not wholly dependent upon national possessions of gold.

United States mints had one of the busiest times in history in the fiscal year ended June 30.

Better business and the usual amount of new coins are credited with the increased demand which shot new coinage for the year up to 608,414,207 pieces with a value of $39,131,127.

This figure is almost 14 times greater than the number of new coins minted in the previous year and 18 times greater than that of 1933.

	Pieces	Value
1935	608,414,207	$39,131,127
1934	46,634,250	3,499,125
1933	32,154,300	27,861,420

While the increase in new coins for the last fiscal year is abnormal, the low value of coinage in the two previous years resulted from the large production of coins of small denominations.

As will be seen by the above figures the 1935 totals were not only well over the totals for 1934 and 1933, but coinage in pieces was nearly double that of 1920 with 385,582,950 pieces, the largest in the last decade.

However, this year's total is well under that of 1929 at $54,225,400.

In the past ten years, the largest mint coinage by value was in the calendar year 1925, totalling $216,456,863, or 308,646,886 pieces.

The huge figures for 1925 are accounted for by the fact that most of the coins were gold, according to the Bureau of the Mint.

In the fiscal year ended June 30, the first silver coins were minted since 1928, and a small number of memorial half dollars were minted. This, it is reported by the bureau, is in line with President Roosevelt's silver program.

The smaller denominations were by far in the greatest demand.

The following table shows the denominations of the coins minted:

Dollars	5,635,557
Quarters	48,905,152
Dimes	69,413,000
Nickels	61,982,003
Pennies	412,266,000
Half dollars (regular)	17,900,000
Half dollars (Memorial)	312,095
Total	608,414,207

Besides the domestic coinage, the United States mint produced 68,500,401 pieces for the governments of Cuba, Colombia, Honduras, Mexico, Nicaragua, Panama and Venezuela.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Who hath known the mind of the Lord, that he may instruct him? But we have the mind of Christ." These words from I Corinthians comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, August 25, in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Mind." Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counsellor? . . . For of him, and through him, and to him, are all things: to whom be glory for ever. Amen" (Rom. 11: 33, 34, 36).

The following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Mind is God . . . We can have but one Mind, if that one is infinite . . . . If God were limited to man or matter, or if the infinite could be circumscribed within the finite, God would be corporeal, and unlimited Mind would seem to spring from a limited body; but this is an impossibility" (pp. 469, 284).

IN BEHALF OF SAFETY

Few of the conditions which result in accidents happen "suddenly". They may seem to do so, but it is entirely a matter of seeming, for had the motorist been a bit more observant he would have noted those prior circumstances which were natural and inevitable preludes.

In other words, if you are alert, you will not be caught off your guard.

UNDER-INFLATED TIRES

When the front tires are under-inflated there is a possibility that the car will not steer properly.

Under-inflated rear tires permit too much side motion or sway and cause discomfort to passengers.

NEVADA TOWNS OFFER RODEO ATTRACTIONS

Choice of two typical "Wild West" events is offered by Nevada as the objective for a motor trip over the holiday week end of August 31, September 1 and 2.

Winnemucca, on the Victory Highway, U. S. 40, will stage its tenth annual Nevada Rodeo during the three days, while Fallon, on the Lincoln Highway, U. S. 50, at the same time will present a Forty-Nine Show with rodeo events as features each day.

Western atmosphere and plenty of it is promised those who attend the rodeo at Winnemucca, which is the trading point for a large cattle country dating back to the early day trading post era of the west.

Fallon's Forty-Nine Show will depict stirring scenes of the gold rush days and is sponsored by the Churchill Post, American Legion. The rodeo features will be all Nevada, with several nationally known riders entered.

PETROCCHI'S FIVE HIT PITCHING WAS IN VAIN

Erratic Base Running, Fielding and Umpiring Spell Defeat—Vasquez Batting Star

(By Al Gould)

There are excuses for the home town aggregation's defeat at Santa Cruz on Sunday afternoon by the Santa Cruz Padres of the State League. The local boys should have won on their merits, for they not only outhit the Padres, but their pitching marvel, Lola Petrocchi was invincible. There must surely be breaks connected with a game when a pitcher twirls a five hit game and goes down to defeat.

There were three very bad breaks for the home town town team. To acquaint the fans with these breaks—we will take the fourth inning of the Padres, when they scored all their runs.

J. Ferriera flied to Albrecht. Travis drove a grounder to Kirby at third, who had oceans of time to make the play at first, but, as the unlooked for generally happens on the easiest of plays, Kirby threw the ball over the head of Zelis, allowing Travis to advance to second. Bradbury, the next Padre batter, hit a high fly to short right field. Carrasco tore to the outfield at the crack of the bat, and after a very remarkable run and due to his haste to make the catch, juggled the ball temporarily while on the dead run, then dropped it. The ball rolled to deep right, allowing Bradbury to advance to third and Travis to score. T. Ferriera singled, the first real hit off Petrocchi, scoring Bradbury. Petrocchi walked Nobriga. Oliver grounded one to Kirby, who for the second time used very poor judgment in not tagging the runner coming down to third, but tossed to Carrasco at second for a force out and placed T. Ferriera on third. On an attempted double steal, Vasquez bungled the play, allowing T. Ferriera to score and Oliver to reach second. Alviso doubled, scoring Oliver. Petrocchi fanned Powles to retire the side. A single and double, coupled with a manufactured triple, two errors, one walk and a couple of poorly executed plays, were just enough to have the wonderful twirling of Petrocchi account for nothing.

In the sixth inning, Maloney, the first batter, singled. Vasquez got his third hit of the day. Nelder sacrificed perfectly. With the winning run on second, Maloney attempted to steal home, being out easily, Alviso to Bradbury. In my opinion the play was a 99 to 1 shot against the fastest and best base-runner.

Then again in the seventh, Albrecht, the first batter, doubled. Kondeff laid down a perfect bunt—here was one of the worst and most costly decisions that Umpire Redding rendered in the game. Settled at second base and being unable to see the play properly he called Albrecht out, which was enough to break the back bone of any ball team.

Johnny Vasquez, popular short stop of the home team, copped the honors as batting hero of the day. In four trips to the plate he got three singles and a double, besides scoring two of his team's tallies. Not a bad afternoon's work for any youngster.

The game in detail:

FIRST INNING

Daly City—Kirby out, Nobriga to Travis. Carrasco popped to Marriott. Maloney fanned. Not hits, no runs, no errors.

Santa Cruz—Powles safe on Petrocchi's overthrow to first. Powles advanced to second. Marriott out to Zelis, unassisted. J. Ferriera popped to Carrasco. Travis flied to Maloney. No hits, no runs, no errors.

SECOND INNING

Daly City—Vasquez singled to deep short. Nelder flied to J. Ferriera. Zelis walked. Albrecht forced Zelis at second, Nobriga to Marriott. When Marriott threw wild to Travis, Vasquez scored. Kondeff at bat. Albrecht stole second, took third on a wild pitch and scored on a second wild pitch. Kondeff fanned. One hit, two runs, one error.

Santa Cruz—Bradbury out, Vasquez to Zelis. T. Ferriera fanned. Nobriga walked. Oliver out, Petrocchi to Zelis. No hits, no runs, no errors.

THIRD INNING

Daly City—Petrocchi lined one to deep center for a double, which missed going over the fence by inches. Kirby fanned. Carrasco popped to Bradbury. Maloney out, Marriott to Travis. One hit, no runs, no errors.

Santa Cruz—Alviso popped to Kirby. Powles fanned. Marriott popped to Carrasco. No hits, no runs, no errors.

FOURTH INNING

Daly City—Vasquez doubled to left. Nelder singled through third. Zelis sacrificed, Marriott to Travis, scoring Vasquez. Albrecht out, Nobriga to Travis. Kondeff fanned. Two hits, one run, no errors.

Santa Cruz—J. Ferriera flied to Albrecht. Travis safe on Kirby's error and advanced to second. Bradbury's Texas leaguer put him on third and Travis scored when the ball rolled to deep right. T. Ferriera singled through the infield, scoring Bradbury. Nobriga walked. Oliver forced Nobriga at second, Kirby to Carrasco. Alviso at bat. On a double steal, T. Ferriera scored and Oliver went to second when Vasquez bungled the throw. Alviso doubled to left scoring Oliver. Powles fanned. Three hits, four runs, three errors.

FIFTH INNING

Daly City—Petrocchi flied to J. Ferriera. Kirby fanned. Carrasco fanned. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Santa Cruz—Marriott flied to Maloney. J. Ferriera singled to center. Travis forced J. Ferriera, Petrocchi to Vasquez. Bradbury out, Petrocchi to Zelis. One hit, no runs, no errors.

SIXTH INNING

Daly City — Maloney singled through the infield. Vasquez singled to short right. Nelder sacrificed, Alviso to Travis. Zelis popped to Nobriga. Maloney nabbed at the plate easily when he attempted to steal home, Alviso to Bradbury. Two hits, no runs, no errors.

Santa Cruz—T. Ferriera flied to Maloney. Nobriga out, Carrasco to Zelis. Oliver flied to Maloney. No hits, no runs, no errors.

SEVENTH INNING

Daly City—Albrecht doubled to left. Kondeff bunted, Albrecht being called out at third, Bradbury to T. Ferriera. Petrocchi fanned. Tremain flied to Powles. One hit, no runs, no errors.

Santa Cruz—Alviso flied to Nelder. Powles flied to Nelder. Marriott walked. J. Ferriera fanned. No hits, no runs, no rerors.

EIGHTH INNING

Daly City—Carrasco out, T. Ferriera to Travis. Maloney fanned. Vasquez singled to left. Nelder flied to Powles. One hit, no runs, no errors.

Santa Cruz—Travis gets credit for a single when umpire Redding called him safe at first. Bradbury hit into a double play, Carrasco to Vasquez to Zelis. T. Ferriera popped to Carrasco. One hit, no runs, no errors.

NINTH INNING

Daly City — Zelis out, Marriott to Travis. Davies, batting for Albrecht, flied to Powles. Hawley, batting for Kondeff, out, T. Ferriera to Travis. No hits, no runs, no errors.

WEEKLY BULLETIN

By Chief A. P. Chesney

Fire, while it is one of man's most useful servants, is also one of his greatest enemies. Like a burglar, fire strikes at an unexpected hour and place. Ten times as many homes, stores and factories are visited by fire as are robbed. Yet we take more precautions to protect our loved ones and valuables against thieves than we do against fire.

The most valuable fire protection is Fire Prevention. The best time to fight fires is before they occur. Fire is not mysterious; it has been thoroughly studied and its causes are well known. Most fires start with conditions which may easily be recognized, not only by experts, but by any thoughtful citizen as well. Most fires may be prevented by the simple process of correcting such evils. Fire plays no favorites; it is an enemy to all; the universal menace that threatens every man, every home and business; it reaches everywhere to exact its toll in human lives, to take its claim in ruined property. Buildings thought fire proof are too often the sport of flames that sweep through them and leave death and destruction. Fire is a parasite that depends on human carelessness; and who pays for it in the end? You do—you pay.

A pleasant evening was spent playing whist.

Among those present were the following: Mesdames H. Sheedy, R. McDonough, A. Parodi, A. Denning, F. C. Callsen, R. Welch, M. Prescott, E. Frazier, J. Gregor, A. Eason, J. Byrne, B. Gimovsky, N. GREAT COMEDIENNE AT GEARY THEATER

A brilliant opening of the fall and winter season is assured at the Geary Theater, for Homer Curran, in association with Melville Brown, announces that on Monday, August 26, he will present the famous American comedienne, Ina Claire, in her latest and one of her greatest comedy successes "Ode to Liberty," with Robert Warwick and Alexander Clark in important roles. The engagement is for two weeks only and matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday.

Miss Claire comes to San Francisco fresh from Eastern triumphs with "Ode to Liberty," for she not only played the comedy through last season, but has appeared in it for some sixteen weeks in the summer theaters in the East, where it proved the best drawing play of the season. Messrs. Curran and Brown are bringing to the Pacific Coast not only the star of "Ode to Liberty," but a majority of the players who appeared with her during the engagement in the East.

Sidney Howard, so well remembered for his other great plays. "The Late Christopher Bean," "They Knew What They Wanted" and the "Silver Cord," as well as for "Dodsworth," which we are yet to enjoy on the West Coast, adapted "Ode to Liberty" from the French play "Liberte Provisiore" by Michel Duran. The comedy ran for more than a year in Paris. It was produced in New York under the management of Gilbert Miller and Miss Claire was accorded triumphant praise for her adept and amusing impersonation of the gay French woman who converts the young Communist from the belief that all rich folk are anathema. Sidney Howard ranks with Eugene O'Neill and Robert Sherwood for the quality of his plays. For the past ten years there has been no season but has seen a success from his pen adorning the stage. It is said that "Ode to Liberty" is one of the most delightful comedies he has ever written and it gives Miss Claire the opportunity to show her brilliant talents to best advantage.

CHIC HOUSE FROCK WINS POPULARITY

PATTERN 9209

Your personal appearance about the house gets a new assurance of chic when you select this cleverly cut frock! A new slant on the popular yoke-sleeve is featured bringing the bodice up to form a round neckline and diagonal shoulder line! The three buttons are a clever way of accenting the new slant. The unusual pockets boast a button for good measure too, and you can see by the diagram that the frock is easy enough for a beginner to make! A printed cotton for the housedress, but a new plaid seersucker or gingham would make a charming run-about frock!

Pattern 9209 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3¼ yards 36 inch fabric.

SEND FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

SOCIALLY SPEAKING

"Is she merciless in social rivalries?"

"Yes," said Miss Cayenne. "Of course, you have heard of the spear that knows no brother."

"What of it?"

"She wields a salad fork that knows no sister."

Business

"Do you think business is good?"

"Beyond a doubt," answered Mr. Dustin Stax. "Our natural resources are enormous and so are the requirements of the people. Business is right there. All we need is the ability to transact it."

Leader

"You are a natural born leader," said the old friend.

"I am," said Senator Sorghum. "I may have to weaken occasionally in congress. But you ought to see me leading the revelries in a night club."

Parole System Defects Hit by Eminent Critic

Six hundred police chiefs attended the convention of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, at Atlantic City. The blunt, frank speech of J. Edgar Hoover, director of investigation, Department of Justice, hammered at the present parole systems throughout the country.

Following up where Attorney General Homer S. Cummings had left off, Mr. Hoover stormed against criminals themselves, their friends and allies, shyster-lawyers, and all others who aid the criminal.

"No one in this assemblage, I feel sure, will scoff at the theory of parole and of rehabilitation. I said 'theory,' not practice. There is a vast difference. The theory is beautiful. The practice approaches a national scandal."

Agreeing with many of Mr. Hoover's contentions, Winthrop D. Lane, director of the division of parole of the Department of Institutions and Agencies in New Jersey, claimed it impossible to keep all convicts within prison, for "it would take 20 times the present capacity of reformatories and prisons to do it."

Commenting on the Hoover speech, Warden Lewis E. Lawes, of Sing Sing prison, said. " a good speech for a policeman," and he added, "The answer to most crime, where not based on mental defectiveness, is social and economic, and we will continue to manufacture criminals so long as we provide the environment for them."—Literary Digest.

Provide Food for Dead

Ojibway Indians still place food for the dead at their burial grounds at L'Anse and Chicaugon, Mich., says a correspondent in the New York Times. Miniature houses are built for the food, and the Indians say their dead come to the houses at midnight and partake of it. As a matter of fact, small animals and birds usually eat the food.

Colma News Notes

The Second Grand Annual picnic will be given by the San Mateo County Druids the coming Sunday at Menlo Park picnic grounds. There will be fun for all who attend, including dancing, games and prizes.

A blessed event took place Sunday of this week, at Mills Memorial Hospital. The parents—Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Cecchi of School street and the infant son—well, we haven't his name yet, but he weighs seven and a half pounds and both he and his mother are doing nicely.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Seven dredges in operation in the Klondike by the end of the year and greater yields from placer and lode operations throughout the Yukon are anticipated in reports from the North.

The continued high price for gold and the encouraging results from prospecting in 1933 combined to stimulate gold miners to still greater efforts in 1934, H. S. Bostock reports.

A new dredge was erected on Forty-mile River, capable of handling 700 to 800 cubic yards of gravel a day, and is being operated this season to prove up favorable ground.

Five dredges in operations in the Klondike area handled six million yards of gravel last year.

Material and equipment for a new dredge is on the ground at Granville and the dredge on Quartz Creek is nearing completion.

The scheme of sluicing and thawing gold-bearing gravels by diverting water from Klondike River gives promise of being successful. Reports state it will be several years before the ground is ready for dredging.

Inca Mining Corporation Ltd. took 40 tons of equipment in last year by way of Teslin and Nisutlin Rivers after prospecting the ground in 1932-33 on Iron Creek placer operations.

Silver Association of Canada, British Columbia branch, is being organized in Vancouver, with the hope that its membership will be extended across the Dominion for the purpose of bringing legitimate pressure to bear upon the government for recognition of the metal by adoption of the United States policy regarding domestic production.

* * *

Progress report of International Gold Mines, Mount Baker area, Whatcom County, Washington, says all equipment in condition and mill now ready for production.

Crew of 25 men has been engaged and all necessary replacements made to mining and milling machinery. The additional equipment purchased is on the ground.

Louis F. Paul, who has been developing a gold quartz showing near Hoonah along with his brother, William Paul, has moved to the property for the season.

The Hoonah property is one of the few mineralized showings in Alaska that is being developed practically in its entirety by native labor. Some time ago, Mr. Paul, through the cooperation of Governor John Troy, secured an appropriation of Territorial money to be used in buying groceries and supplies for the natives in the Hoonah section engaged in developing the mineral resources of that section. Nine miners were employed, the arrangement being that each native miner be allowed supplies to the extent of $10 per month for himself and each of his dependents. The nine men have a total of twenty-one dependents, and the cost per month amounts to $300 in supplies. In addition to this the miners retain a percentage of any profits that may be the result of their labor.

SPLENDORS OF EXPO LIGHTING IS MARVELED AT

Night brings splendor to America's Exposition.

As the last slanting rays of afternoon sun fall across the $20,000,000 world's fair, a thousand switches are pulled and a million vari-colored lights paint a picture of unsurpassing beauty in a setting that rivals a tropical paradise.

Painting with light rather than flooding with light is the motif employed in this giant illumination project. From a thousand hidden floodlights and spotlights, more than 30 delicate pastel colors play across the walls, towers and tile cupolas of the 100 buildings that comprise the Exposition plant.

In a wilderness of palm trees, where aimless gravel paths wander endlessly, engineers have created a trysting bower to delight the hearts of lovers from all over the world. Green, orange, red and brilliant yellow searchlights play through the palm fronds.

This is only one of the many beauty spots conceived and executed by Otto K. Olesen, Hollywood lighting artist, widely known for his novel technical effects in motion pictures.

One of the chief lighting features at the fair is that atop the outdoor organ, known as the "Aurora Borealis." This unique display consists of seven high intensity searchlights fed by a huge motor generator set, located at the base. The seven lights, mounted on a revolving turntable fifteen feet in diameter, constitute and reflect the outstanding colors of the Aurora Borealis.

The seven beams of light rove over San Diego bay, hills, the city proper, and the exposition area. In clear weather they can be seen at a distance of from 25 to 30 miles.

On the arch of the future in the Plaza del Pacifico are set 52 sun-spot lights with intense parallel beams for long range projection. This type of light, well adapted to colors, reflects the buildings surrounding the Plaza del Pacifico in limpid pools of water. They play on the statue of El Cid Campeador in the plaza and stress scroll work, art, and sculpture adorning the sides of nearby Spanish structures.

In all, thousands of lighting units are placed strategically about the exposition grounds. These range from the smallest 100-watt projectors to mammoth high intensity arc spots and floods of over one-half billion candlepower each.

Novel color effects with trees, shrubs, and flowers especially appeal to nocturnal fair visitors. At all points, in deep canyon recesses, and on borders of beaten paths, tests have been made to ascertain the best color shades adaptable to the surroundings. Colors are abundant in the semi-tropical trees and plants of the park and because of the wide variety of shades it has been necessary to use practically all of the 30 different light colors in most sections.

WILL PLAY WHIST

The Royal Neighbors of America will hold a whist party, Friday evening, September 6, at Masonic Hall.

Reserve this date, as Mrs. Agnes Wood, chairman of the evening, assures all who attend a pleasant time.

FORD SERVICE DIVISION AWARDS CLUB EMBLEMS

Coveted Honor Is Bestowed On Many Parts Dealer Employees

Thirty-eight service managers and parts department heads, representing Ford dealerships from the southern end of the San Joaquin Valley to Klamath Falls, Ore., were entertained by officials of the Ford Motor Company Richmond Branch, Wednesday of last week, at a luncheon at the Berkeley Country Club. The occasion was the presentation of Merit Club emblems and the awarding of memberships in the Ford service division "legion of honor" to the men from the 202 Ford dealerships under the Richmond branch who had qualified for the most coveted honor that can be awarded to a member of the service forces of the Ford dealer body.

The Merit Club emblems were presented by C. A. Bullwinkel, the Richmond branch manager, as the name of the men winning the award were announced by R. E. Grylich, head of the Service Division at the Ford Richmond branch. A bit of romance was brought into the presentation ceremonies when the award was made to Elmer Bridge, parts department manager for L. C. Firestone, Ford dealer in Oakland. Branch Manager Bullwinkel announced that Elmer Bridge had commenced his career with the Ford Motor Company as an office boy in Bullwinkel's office, some twenty years ago, and it was a great pleasure for him to present the Merit Club emblem to his former associate. As Bride received his Merit Club "decoration" he received a volley of applause from his fellow Ford service men and the assembled guests.

Joseph J. Hague, assistant manager of the Richmond branch, was one of the speakers at the luncheon and his remarks to the service men were well received, as was indicated by the enthusiastic applause.

Among those at the speakers' table was Leland Johnson, head of the Lincoln Division of the Ford Motor Company through the Richmond branch territory.

Following the luncheon there was a meeting of the service experts at the branch and a personally conducted tour of inspection through the plant where the service "legion of honor" men saw the Ford V-8 cars and trucks in the process of production.

Mrs. Wight, who is seriously ill, formerly resided on San Diego avenue for a number of years and wishes to be remembered to her many local friends.

FOREIGN WAR VETERANS NIGHT AT BADEN TRACK

Preparations were under way today for one of the biggest programs of the year at Baden Kennel Club—Veterans of Foreign Wars night, Saturday, August 24. Fred B. Linser, chairman of the committee, has invited various uniformed bodies of the V. F. W. to participate, together with the Daly City Band. High ranking officials of the V. F. W. will be introduced.

All San Mateo County posts of the organization will participate, Lisner said today.

Meanwhile, the "Sport of Queens" continued to develop new racing champions at Baden this week. The track with the inside rabbit, best designed to produce naturally run races, drew one of the largest crowds of the entire meeting Saturday night, when Galloper, the great Baden champion, romped home half a length shead of Happy Laddie in a sensational three-dog matched race. Parade, Galloper's litter brother, ran a bang up third to prove that he, too, is a contender for championship honors.

All three dogs are sons of My Laddie, the 1932 Baden champion. My Laddie, in turn, is the son of Traffic Officer, one of the most famous of all racing greyhounds. Traffic Officer has been California's leading stud dog for many years, having produced in addition to My Laddie, such champions as Dancing Officer and Police Court.

My Laddie, a full brother to Galloper, is the ranking champion at the Bristol County Kennel club near Boston, Mass., giving Baden's My Laddie a claim on national honors.
